

First Students started Ashesi-ETH Master's in Mechatronics Engineering

The master's programme is part of the ETH for Development (ETH4D) initiative, which aims to develop innovations to address global challenges.

28 April 2022

With 26 highly motivated students from seven African countries, the new Ashesi-ETH Master's programme started in early 2022.

The aim of the jointly developed programme at Ashesi University is to provide young African talents with a top-level engineering education, empowering them to shape sustainable development in Africa.

Over the past year, ETH Zurich and Ashesi University teams have been working flat out to set up the curriculum, obtain the necessary accreditations, find funding and publicise the programme among students in Africa.

None of this would have been possible without the generous support of numerous industry and funding partners. On behalf of all beneficiaries, we express our sincere gratitude!

In the impact report, you will learn more about the preparation, the activities so far and get to know some of the people behind this amazing initiative.

To the impact report

<https://ethz-foundation.ch/en/spotlight/news-2022-ashesi-ir/>

PDF exported on 05/11/2025 16:02

© 2025 ETH Zurich Foundation